Miss Ellen Hayard Lee to Wed John Mallison Wilson, Formerly of Scotland.

An event of interest throughout the State will take place in old Ware Church at Gloucester on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Ellen Hayard Lee, daughter of the Rev. William Byrd Lee and Mrs. Lee, will be married to John Mallison Wilson, formerly of Scotland, but now of Henrico. The bride will enter the church with her brother, William Byrd Lee, Jr., by whom she will be given in marriage, and Miss Jane Knowlton Lee will be her sister's maid of honor. The best man will be Henry Edmunds Hutcheson, and the ushers will include William Ludwell Baldwin, of Norfolk; George Cary and Pace Cobb, both of Gloucester.

Among the guests attending the wedding from a distance will be Mr. and Mrs. William Ludwell Baldwin and Miss Elizabeth Payne, of Norfolk; Mrs. Albert H. Hodge, of Elizabeth City; Miss Ida Jones, of Fairfax; and Miss Sally Berkeley Nelson, of "The Cedars," Richmond.

Invitations Out.—Hubert Pierre Lefebvre has issued invitations for the marriage of his sister, Miss Annie Fried Lefebvre, to Cecil Orlan Jones, the ceremony to be celebrated on Wednesday, November 4, at 8:30 o'clock, in the home of the bride, 1700 Park Avenue. Allard-Wann.—The marriage of Miss Lila Pearl Mann, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Annie Mann, to Claude J. Allard, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. Allard of Cary, Michigan, was solemnized at 11 o'clock yesterday morning at the home of the bride, 400 Floyd Avenue. The parlors and hall were decorated with palms and chrysanthemums, the color scheme being yellow and green.

While the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march were being played, a tabernacle was formed before an improvised altar of palms and chrysanthemums, and at the final strains of the processional the curtains were drawn. The bride was becomingly attired in a going-away gown of tulle de negre balmain, with hat and gloves to match, and carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. She wore as her only ornament a cameo and pearl brooch, the gift of the groom.

The maid of honor, Miss Carita App, of Lynchburg, wore a yellow gown of French crepe with an overskirt of real lace and tulle, and a black hat. She carried yellow chrysanthemums. Little Maude Constance Mann, niece of the bride, held the silver tray with the ring. William Roane, of Richmond, attended the groom as best man. The wedding was performed by Rev. E. V. Carson.

The bride, wearing a traveling costume of Russian green gabardine, with corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley, was attended by her sister, Miss Brownie Buck, who was attired in white, and carried an armful of yellow chrysanthemums. Payson Bruce was his brother's best man.

Mrs. Braslow comes of an old New York family, tracing her descent back through a line of Knickerbocker celebrities to early Colonial days. She has resided in Washington several years, and has identified herself with many benevolent organizations, including the Junior Republic, of which she is president. Mr. Fendall's family is distinguished in the history of Maryland. He descends in a direct line from Josiah Fendall, one of its early Colonial governors.

Shoes Down at Heels

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

Down-at-the-heel shoes are closely related to up-in-the-air nerves, and frazzled nerves are productive of many varieties of the headache, to which women are heirs. The worn shoe heel does not cause all of the headaches, but it is responsible for a great many of them.

When the feet are not on a level base the body is thrown into a low-sided position, which strains muscles and nerves. The nerve system is as delicate as it is extensive, and each branch is in delicate communication with the brain. Disturb this system to the slightest degree and the disturbance is felt in the head.

The whole body is animated by nerves. The foot that is twisted to an angle is quick to inform the brain of its misfortune, and a protest is filed, and all the way from the sole of the foot to the base of the head the message, traveling brainward, causes a disturbance, and sometimes serious disorders, which result in additional pain. The delicate balance of the brain with such force that it causes the head to ache.

It is not only the nervous system that is upset by the worn-off shoe heel. The delicately balanced internal organs are thrown out of place and gear. The whole effect on the body that rests on the down-at-the-heel shoe is harmful, and frequently disastrous.

Remember: If you want to keep a level head and avoid frazzled nerves, keep your feet on the level.

Lillian Russell's Answers.

T. G. K.: I am sorry, but I am afraid there isn't much I can do about the pox scars. It is difficult to remove deep scars. However, massage with a good skin food may help you. This will feed the skin and make it gradually fill in the scars. It will be a long, tedious process, however, and I cannot say that it is a sure cure. You might consult your physician. Perhaps he knows of a cure and can help you.

Lucille: Any exercise that involves the muscles of the arms will develop them and make them fatter. Massage with cocoa butter is also good. To massage the arms, first melt the cocoa butter, then massage with a wringing, twisting motion. Do not do this too hard.

Mrs. Mary T.: This is an excellent exercise for reducing the size of the waist: Stand with the feet nearly together and the arms extended above the head; then the arms are relaxed at the wrists and elbows, so that a slight curved line is formed. First sway to the left, bending at the waist line as far as possible, and return to the original position; then sway to the right.

R. E.: It is slow, tedious work to reduce the bust, and must be accompanied by an oblique regimen besides local treatment. Mix thoroughly two grams aristol, thirty grams white vaseline, and ten drops essence of peppermint. Apply this to your bust, then cover with oiled silk. Gentle massage with spirits of camphor is sometimes helpful. Be sure that the massage is gentle. Any vigorous exercise that involves the muscles of the chest will tend to reduce the bust. Exercises with chest weights are also good. In the evening the weights should not be over two pounds and a half. The weights may be gradually increased to five pounds, according to the increase of your strength.

J. S.: You would be a foolish girl if you attempted to reduce your bust. Thirty-five inches is not too large for your age and height. Another thing, you are far too young to attempt anything of this kind. You are a growing girl and may ruin your health by attempting to reduce your bust. Thirty-six inches is the average bust measurement.

Dr. Brady's Health Talks

IS ALCOHOL A MEDICINE?

Drugs are prescribed in the treatment of disease according to distinct lines of reasoning. First and more important, the empirical use of drugs is meant simply giving medicine which has been tried in a purely empirical way by many practitioners for years back and proved efficacious or presumably efficacious. This type of empirical remedies is the type of empirical remedies which have been used for centuries. Quinine was accidentally found to cure malaria long before the physiological effect upon the malarial parasite in the blood was known. No one knows exactly how quinine cures malaria, though we believe it is a cure. It destroys the malarial parasite in the blood, but not enough, for we can hardly administer sufficient quinine to a patient to poison the parasite in the circulating blood.

The second line of reasoning employed in the selection of remedies is called rational treatment. That means administering a drug which will produce some definite physiological effect upon the functions of the body. When we prescribe caffeine or codine or bala-donna or ergot, we have a rational view, and we do not prescribe merely because some one else has given it to patients who had the same illness. It is rational treatment to administer drugs which tend to lower blood pressure when we find the blood pressure too high.

Science Has Found a Verdict.

All important drugs have been sorted out and classified according to their characteristic physiological action. Strychnine, digitalis, opium, morphine, hyoscyne, ipecac, cocaine, acetone, and dozens of other drugs are employed nowadays for a definite purpose.

Alcohol was once prescribed empirically. Now we know precisely how it acts. Upon the heart, blood pressure, brain centres, spinal centres, temperature, respiration and digestion. It has been worked out beyond dispute. No longer is the patient pilled with alcohol because he has pneumonia or typhoid or a fainting spell or surgical or accidental shock. When the patient's generation ago took for stimulation a glass of alcohol, it was a weak pulse with a lowered blood pressure. The sense of warmth of the skin under the dose of alcohol proved to be a dangerous dissipation of vital heat at the expense of the internal temperature.

Alcohol, in whatever form or what quantity, never stimulates heart, brain or digestion. It merely deceives the individual and his friends with the superficial appearance of improvement. Wine, porter, whiskey or brandy or patent medicine—alcohol never tones or feeds or strengthens. It simply deceives for the time being.

Questions and Answers.—A. R. W. inquires: What is the objection to small, frequent doses of castor oil in the treatment of chronic constipation? Reply: No very serious objection, except that each dose tends to bind the bowel next day, and so you acquire a habit unless you really like the flavor of castor oil.

J. H. writes: 1. Are the drops used by eye specialists when testing the vision dangerous in any way? 2. Are drops necessary? 3. If so, how many? Reply: (1) No. (2) According to the best expert opinion drops are necessary in testing the vision. (3) The drops temporarily do away with the patient's unconscious focusing of the eye, and thus permit the physician to measure accurately the "latent" eye-strain which would have to be guessed at without drops.

Mrs. X. asks: Is X-ray treatment advisable after the removal of a skin cancer? I have had a small growth removed from my cheek, and I am advised to have the scar exposed to X-rays a few times right away. Reply: Yes, it is a good idea. A few light X-rays will help to prevent recurrence. Even though all the cancer was removed, even though the involved tissues were apparently removed, a few invisible cancer cells might remain, and these the X-ray will destroy.

SAYS COFFEE DRINKERS HAVE REAL DRUG HABIT

Physician Declares Food Value Is Nil and People Use It Only for Stimulation.

That many people are slaves to tea and coffee appears from a statement of Dr. C. J. Douglass, of Dorchester, Mass. "They do not distinguish the difference between drugs and food in their effect on the system."

"Coffee is a substitute for an enervating drug. When the effect of one dose has worn off, another dose of the same drug must be taken or discomfort follows, but if nutrition is supplied, a hundred different foods can satisfy the demand with equally satisfactory results."

"Tea and coffee are never taken because of any small nutritive element they may contain. Some drink them in small quantities merely because the taste is agreeable, or to wash down solid food."

"On the other hand, if a sufficient quantity is habitually taken, so that when they are discontinued, uncomfortable symptoms follow, then it is evident that a drug habit has been formed."

"If, for example, a person habitually drinks so much coffee for breakfast that on omitting it he 'misses something' during the forenoon, he may be set down as an excessive coffee drinker. He is relying on the stimulation of the drug, caffeine, and the daily use of any drug for such a purpose is injurious."

NOTE.—The food-drink INSTANT PORTUM, while much resembling the higher grades of Java coffee in flavor and aroma, is absolutely free from caffeine, and is therefore entirely safe for any other harmful ingredient. Recent decrease in coffee sales is generally attributed to the growing American custom of using Postum as a table beverage instead of coffee.

The Trey O'Hearts

Romantic Tale by Louis Joseph Vance.

Copyright, 1914, by Louis Joseph Vance.

SYNOPSIS.

By arrangement with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, it is possible to read "The Trey O'Hearts" in The Times-Dispatch and also to see it in pictures at the Supreme Theatre. The story is a romance of the sea. The main characters are: The trey of hearts is the death sign used by Suica Trine in the private war waged by him through his daughter, Judith, against Alan Law, whose father, Rose Trine, was killed through his accident that made him a cripple for life. Law and Rose, Judith's twin sister, love each other, and Rose dies to his assistance. Judith's life is saved by Alan, and she falls in love with him, but, before she can marry him, the lovers implacably surviving many dangers, attempts on his life. Alan learns that Rose is being taken West by her father, and that his friend, Tom Barcus, proposes to go on the same train, disguised as a colored porter. He follows and rescues Rose and Barcus. Judith, after wrecking the train on which the three are traveling, kills her father's party, which is held up by a bandit, whom Trine employs to kill Alan and Judith. Judith captures the two men, and takes the train and the higher boat, which captures and binds her to the back of a horse. Alan follows her bandit, and starts to the rescue of Judith.

CHAPTER LXXV.—TO THE RESCUE.

With a look of triumph for the benefit of Mr. Barcus, Alan Law gathered Rose Trine into his arms.

"Did you dream for an instant Rose would see her own sister carried to her death if anything could be done to avert it—no matter what we may have suffered at Judith's hands?" he demanded before lowering his head. "Not my Rose."

With an indignant grunt, but considering none the less, Mr. Barcus caught up the glasses and turned his back.

"Go on!" he grumbled, pretending to ignore the fact that Alan offered him from the saddle. "I've got no patience with you. But go!" he insisted, of a sudden seizing the hand and pressing it fervently. "And God go with you, my friend!"

Then hoofbeats drumming on the hard-packed earth of the canyon trail struck a hundred echoes from its rugged rock walls.

Mr. Barcus showed Rose Trine a face almost ludicrous with its anguished smile that was intended to seem reassuring.

"Let's look sharp and follow him as quick as may be," he urged. "Lightning will never strike us so long as we stick to Mr. Law of the charmed life—but I don't mind telling you, once out of his company, I'm just naturally afraid of the dark!"

II.—The Trail of Flying Hoof-Prints.

In the still air of that young day the chill of night lingered stubbornly, and would until the shadow of the foot rampart, or crest, or slide down the canyon's western wall, telescoped upon itself and vanished, letting in the sun to make the place a pit of torment and of burning.

By this grateful coolness, his horse responded willingly to the first light touch of Alan's spur. In a twinkling the rampart camp dropped from view behind the rounded shoulder of a hillside, menquite-cloaked.

Then from its first spirited flight the horse settled down to steady going, lengthened its stride, and ranched with the long, apparently effortless and tireless lunge of the plains-bred broncho, ventre-a-terre.

The canyon trail was tolerably broad and well defined, while the horse knew that sort of going so much better than that rider that Alan soon relinquished to it the choice of following a wide route with a loose rein and a mind altogether detached from his own circumstances, save as they affected his purpose, his mental processes centred exclusively upon the object of the pursuit.

By visions of horror it had conjured up at first vision of the woman bound to the back of the maddened animal and vacillating of stirring hand or foot to avert disaster in any one of a dozen frightful shapes.
